Swedenborg's teaching about heaven and variety presented by Julian Duckworth

People say that variety is the spice of life. They may have all kinds of things in mind, but variety and all the various things that go to make up our lives is a big factor in our enjoyment, renewal and motivation.

Swedenborg goes even further and says that heaven is increasingly perfected by its variety. He is always highlighting the need for variety, sometimes generally and at times very specifically.

We will explore this great topic and look at what Swedenborg relates, and look too at our own diversity as people who also have our similarities, as well as considering the benefits of different experiences, new realisations, fresh avenues and a change of heart.

"No two things in all of Divine creation are ever the same."
– Swedenborg –

Julian is a contented user of Swedenborg, particularly his spiritual and Biblical teachings. He also enjoys chasing up new areas of Swedenborg's work, of which this topic is a useful example.
